Protestant Reformation

protestant

"A member of a Western Christian church whose faith and practice are founded on the principles of the Protestant Reformation, especially in the acceptance of the Bible as the sole source of revelation, in justification by faith alone, and in the universal priesthood of all the believers.

One who makes a declaration or an avowal.

To object to, especially in a formal statement.

To promise or affirm with earnest solemnity.

To proclaim or make known."

reformation

"A 16th-century movement in Western Europe that aimed at reforming some doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic Church and resulted in the establishment of the Protestant churches.

A change for the better; an improvement.

Correction of evils, abuses, or errors."

We date the beginning of the Protestant Reformation movement from October 31, 1517, the day that Martin Luther posted on the town bulletin board (the church door) a paper in which he proposed a discussion of 95 reforms needed in the Church. Although there had been previous reformers, many of whom had been martyred, this occurrence became the start of a concerted effort (movement) to change these unscriptural beliefs and practices. Luther had no plan to start a new church, but the effects of this Reformation were felt all over Europe and even as far away as North and South America.

The tenets of the Reformation are still the fundamental beliefs of the Protestant churches today.
